

CERES Summer School 2009

'Where research meets policy and practice'

CIDIN - Radboud University Nijmegen – 2 & 3 July 2009

Development Research & Policy Practice

*'Broad variety of themes: cross cutting issues in development'
'Interaction between academics, policy makers and development practitioners'*

The Summer School 2009 focuses on effective linkages and productive interfaces between scientific research and international development programs. Main attention is given to ongoing Science-Policy programs within the framework of the International Cooperation Academy (also called IS-Academy) and DPRN. This two-day event will be organised to offer staff and PhD students from different universities the possibility to present their progress in field research. Their presentations will receive feedback from staff of the Dutch Ministry for Development Cooperation and staff from the non-governmental co-financing organisations involved in ongoing development programs.

The CERES Summer School offers:

- insights in current research issues related to development
- a professional platform of policy makers and development practitioners.
- a network event for young and innovative researchers on development themes

The CERES Summer School is organized for:

- researchers, PhD's, students
- governmental and non-governmental policymakers
- development practitioners
